Subject: Doctoral supervision enquiry — transitional justice, diaspora politics, practice-based case

Dear Professor,

I am writing about doctoral supervision in transitional justice and diaspora politics, with a practice-based case already running.

I operate a public archive on post-conflict accountability in the Tamil-Eelam context under a UK Community Interest Company. It works to Berkeley Protocol practice and tiered sourcing, refuses survivor intake and perpetrator naming, and publishes a refusal record when material falls below its own thresholds. Recent additions include nineteen printable institutional dossiers, a citations registry, a public evaluation suite for the retrieval layer, and a continuity protocol covering founder-independence.

The thesis would formalise the method rather than defend the archive: what borrowed evidentiary discipline produces for a body without a mandate, and what it removes.

A two-page progress note and a one-page statement of intended publications are attached. I would be grateful for twenty minutes if this sits near your interests.

Kind regards,

M. Santhuru
