

Journalists for Democracy in Sri Lanka (JDS)

Berlin-based independent journalism network founded by exiled Sri Lankan journalists — producing investigative reporting on accountability, militarisation and the situation of journalists who could not remain inside the country.

JDS is the cited example of journalism continuing in exile. Its existence is itself evidence of the press-freedom pattern OHCHR, CPJ and RSF document — that the route to investigative work on Sri Lanka has, for some journalists, required leaving.

§1 Why it sits in /case

TLTE does not run a newsroom and does not employ journalists. /case cites JDS where its published work is the source — never as op-sec partner, never as intake route. Journalists at risk should approach Rory Peck Trust, Access Now and their own outlet's protocols, not TLTE.

Sources

- Journalists for Democracy in Sri Lanka (JDS) — Berlin.
- CPJ — Sri Lanka country record.
- RSF — Sri Lanka country profile.

What this is not

- This article does not provide journalist op-sec.
- This article does not name JDS contributors.